Time for a Change!

The hardest part about changing careers is the emotional leap required to jump out of what has become a routine, or your comfort zone. Many people reach a stage in their life when there is a great reason for a change in employment. Here are some common themes

All of the examples below started with a free 30 minute discussion in our office. And all were successful because of the plan we created together and the resume that worked!

We have literally hundreds of these success stories and we are here for you - should you wish to become one –just like these examples.

- An executive who had worked his entire life in the corporate world and all that entails - commuter traffic - stress - high pressure boardroom meetings - hitting targets and deadlines, managing projects, monitoring numbers, travelling and working in airport lounges, meetings, meetings, meetings. Up early, home late and time rushing by.

But stop! Now that the kids are grown up and the mortgage is manageable perhaps it's time to do something FUN. But how?

- A 45 year old woman, recently divorced wants to start a new life in a new city. New job, new friends, new places and a new life to live.
- A 50 year old woman has been out of the workforce for 15 years - working her full time job as a mother! Now its time to reenter the workforce - but things have changed - and her confidence is not what it used to be - are her skills still marketable? - Is SHE still marketable - now what?
- An accountant just noticed a really cool job in the travel industry which would be a ton of fun and pays well too. But the job is so different - how will he ever get an interview?
- A student wants a humanitarian job in Uganda - but without work experience it will be impossible to be noticed - won't it?
- A government employee wants to start a consulting business in another province - but how can he tell potential clients how good he is?
- A manager is SO sick of doing more and more work with little thanks from his boss and needs to get out - but how?
